Dear Ms. Langford,

I am writing in reply to your advertised role and am seeking to be part of the industrial year placement program as mobile app developer for Mobile Industries Inc.

I am a student currently studying as an undergraduate of software engineering at Aberystwyth university, and am currently on track for a 1st class degree. I have a solid background understanding of fundamental programming techniques and methodologies, including a wide range of experience in a variety of different programming languages (including Java, JavaScript, HTML and C).

I feel I have all the personal qualities relevant to fill the advertised position. I am a strong self-starter and regularly take the time to teach myself about subject areas outside of the scope of my studies. Currently, I am taking part of a voluntary android development workshop in order to gain experience with mobile application development. My strong communication skills can be emphasised by my working part time as a practical demonstrator to first year computer science students.

I would relish the opportunity to work with in a modern mobile development environment to gain experience alongside professional developers in this field. I feel that my varied skill set, eagerness to learn and enthusiasm for my subject qualifies me for consideration as an app developer for your organisation. I look forward to discussing how I can be of value to Mobile Industries Inc. in this coming year.

Sincerely,

Samuel Jackson
